Iggy & The Stooges	Telluric Chaos	Iggy &amp; The Stooges practically invented punk rock. They split up in 1974. 30 years later, The Stooges reformed, and first released a live album documenting the reunion performing in Japan – appropriately on Skydog Records who released their infamous final gig album ‘Metallic K.O.’ in 1976. Recorded in Tokyo in 2004, the album features 17 tracks over 70+ minutes, including the old Stooges classics plus new songs. A documentary film on The Stooges, Gimme Danger directed by Jim Jarmusch, is being promoted by Amazon Studios and following film festival showings is released in USA on 28th October and in the UK 18th November. Double-LP gatefold in Limited Edition Red &amp; White vinyl! Iggy &amp; The Stooges re-united after 30 years, captured live in Tokyo in 2004. The follow-up to the notorious 1976 ‘Metallic KO’ album from Skydog. Coincides with Jim Jarmusch’s Iggy &amp; the Stooges documentary ‘Gimme Danger’ Tracklisting:  Loose, Down On The Street, 1969, I Wanna Be Your Dog, TV Eye, Dirt, Real Cool Time, No Fun, 1970, Fun House, Skull Ring, Dead Rock Star, Little Electric Chair, Little Doll, My Idea Of Fun, I Wanna Be Your Dog, Not Right. Isaac Hayes	Do Your Thing	"The full 33-minute, unreleased, psychedelic funk jam session by Memphis rhythm kingpins the Bar-Kays, mixed directly from the original tapes. Contains bonus rhythm section instrumental and booklet detailing the history of this never-before-heard version of one of Isaac Hayes' most famous songs by Hayes historian Bill Dahl. Hayes was already a cutting-edge funk master at Stax Records when he accepted the unprecedented assignment of creating a soundtrack for the 1971 action flick Shaft. At a time when R&amp;B songs routinely timed out at three minutes and under, Hayes' albums for Stax's Enterprise imprint had been breaking new ground since 1969. His masterpiece Hot Buttered Soul consisted of only four tracks, two songs on The Isaac Hayes Movement clocked in at a hair under 12 minutes, and one selection on his ...To Be Continued stretched to 15:33. But his epic "Do Your Thing," one of the cornerstones of the two-LP Shaft soundtrack, outdid them all. Occupying nearly the entire last side of the set, it concluded after 19-and-a-half grooving minutes with the overdubbed sound of a needle scratching violently across a piece of vinyl. No one knew that jarring ending masked the existence of another 13 minutes of "Do Your Thing." Consigned to the vaults, those improvisatory extensions—somewhere in between free-jazz and psychedelic rock—were seemingly destined never to be heard. Until now."

Jimi Hendrix	Morning Symphony Ideas	Morning Symphony Ideas ist ein offizielles "Bootleg", das Jimis Qualitäten als Songwriter und seine einmalige Vorgehensweise bei der Entwicklung neuen Soundmaterials im Tonstudio in den Fokus rückt. Die Collection präsentiert drei schillernde Geniestreiche des Gitarristen aus dem Jahr 1969, die ihn und seine Mitstreiter Billy Cox und Buddy Miles in funkige Gefilde führten. „Jungle“, der Track auf der A-Seite der 10“-Vinyl-LP, entstand am 14. November in den Record Plant-Studios in L.A. Auf der B-Seite ist mit „Room Full Of Mirrors“ ein Track aus einer September-Session zu hören. Wieder war Buddy Miles mit von der Partie, als diese energiegeladene Neuinterpretation des Titels entstand, an dem sich Jimi bereits während der Electric-Ladyland-Sessions versucht hatte. „Strato Strut“ ist der letzte Song auf Morning Symphony Ideas. Er stammt aus einer Session vom Dezember des Jahres, die ebenfalls in den Record Plant-Studios stattfand und Songs wie „Message To Love“ oder den „Earth Blues“ hervorbrachte. Die Zusammenstellung wurde von Janie Hendrix, Eddie Kramer und John McDermott für Experience Hendrix, L.L.C. produziert.

Jungle Brothers	Done By The Forces Of Nature	"The Jungle Brothers' 1988 debut, Straight Out The Jungle, was important for many reasons. It was sloppy and goofy but had moments of real focus and social consciousness. It was a true "kitchen sink" record, that caught a rap fanbase enraptured by Eric B. &amp; Rakim, Public Enemy and Boogie Down Productions a bit off-guard. Also of note, beyond the excellence of the album itself, the Jungle Brothers were the fulcrum for what would become the Native Tongues movement – they came first, De La Soul and A Tribe Called Quest followed, under their guidance. By 1989, the group had even more confidence, plus a Warner Bros. contract and advance in their back pocket. They used it to great advantage on the self-produced and criminally underrated Done By The Forces Of Nature, expanding their sonic palette and continuing their Afrocentric approach to music and life. Singles like "What 'U' Waitin' 4" and "Doin' Our Own Dang" (with De La and Q-Tip, alongside Monie Love) showed the group's fun side, which has also lead the way in the "hip-house" movement. But things weren't all fun and games, as deeper, more pensive album tracks like "Black Woman," "Beeds On A String," and "Acknowledge Your Own History" show. It was another accomplished mix of fun, frolic and knowledge-of-self, proving that you could be serious in the rap game but still let off steam and fill the dancefloor. Done By The Forces Of Nature stands as one of the most cherished hip-hop documents of the late '80s among true-school heads, and this edition is the perfect way to revisit this classic thinking-man's (and woman's) rap platter. Issued for the first time ever on 2-LP with the original picture sleeve artwork, it also comes with a reproduction of the original insert, with credits and lyrics."

Rolling Stones	Ride 'Em On Down	Nach über 10 Jahren sind die Rolling Stones endlich zurück und präsentieren neben ihrem brandneuen Album „Blue &amp; Lonesome“ die Vinyl-Single „Ride 'Em On Down“! Die Stones gehen mit dieser Vinyl-Singleauskopplung wie auch mit dem neuen Tonträger zu ihren Wurzeln als Band zurück. „Ride `Em On Down“ ist ebenfalls auf dem neuen Longplayer der Band vertreten, das Original dieses Schmuckstücks stammt aus dem Jahre 1955 und wurde von Eddie Taylor geschrieben. Innerhalb weniger Tage im vergangenen Dezember nahmen The Rolling Stones „Blue &amp; Lonesome“ in den British Grove Studios in West London auf – nur einen Steinwurf entfernt von Richmond und Eel Pie Island, wo sie als junge Bluesband in Pubs und Clubs ihre Karriere begannen. Die Band - Mick Jagger, Keith Richards, Charlie Watts und Ronnie Wood - wurde dabei von ihren langjährigen Tour-Musikern Darryl Jones (Bass), Chuck Leavell (Keyboards) und Matt Clifford (Keyboards) unterstützt. “Das Album ist ein Manifest der Reinheit ihrer Liebe zum Musizieren. Blues ist die Quelle von allem, das die Stones tun“, so Don Was, Co-Producer von Blue &amp; Lonesome über das neue Werk. Das neue Album wurde von The Glimmer Twins (aka Mick Jagger und Keith Richards) und Don Was gemeinsam produziert. Letzterer war ebenfalls bereits am letzten Album „A Bigger Bang“ (2005) beteiligt. Im Jahre 1962 gegründet zählen die Stones zu den erfolgreichsten und langlebigsten Rockbands der gesamten Rockgeschichte und sitzen seit 1989 völlig zu Recht im heiligen Olymp der Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame.

Rudy Ray Moore	This Ain't No White Christmas	"Rudy Ray Moore was a storyteller extraordinaire, a hilarious, low-down dirty man, and a legit trailblazer in the world of no-holds-barred, fuck-the-censors comedy. This classic, live Christmas album shows Moore in the 1970s form that cemented his late-night legacy. Side 1 is for early evening listening, when family and respectable friends might still be around. (The dirty stuff is for the flip.) The song "Merry Christmas, Baby" starts things off – a slow, dusty blues number bolstered by a wobbly but upright backing band. The song itself is PG, extolling the virtues of a caring partner and the joy of the season. Truth be told, it's a warm and wonderful holiday song. With the band gently strolling behind him, he then lays into Christmas tales from childhood up through modern day trials, tribulations and hilarities. "I can remember when me and my brother were six years old," he says. "We hung our stockings up on the mantelpiece, and the health department made us take them down." Good old fashioned family fun. But with the man also known Dolemite, the "down and dirty" is never far away. Side 2 is where things get good (and X-rated), for the late night listening pleasure. It all starts with Rudy retelling "The Night Before Christmas" – with his grooving backing band – in his trademark raunchy style, complete with mice and rats getting it on. Also included on this side is a psychedelic blues number, detailing Brother Rap's visit to heaven (to get dirty, of course). And it all finishes up with a thematically appropriate Christmas themed tale, with the term mtherf*cker used in potentially record-breaking numbers. It's what you'd expect from the legendary, foul-mouthed, groundbreaking comedy legend. A perfect way to keep the Holidays from becoming too much of a Hallmark moment."

UGK	Int'l Players Anthem	Texas Shaped Picture Disc: "Int'l Players Anthem (I Choose You)" by U.G.K. is one of the most recognizable Hip Hop songs of the 2000s. This is the kind of record that can be heard anywhere, from car shows in Texas to basement parties in Brooklyn, maybe even at your cousin's wedding. This song is so good that at the 2007 BET Hip Hop Awards Kanye West famously gave his Video Of The Year award to U.G.K. after "Stronger" beat "Int'l Players Anthem". Let's also not forget it's Grammy Nomination. Yes it's that good. U.G.K.'s celebratory anthem also features Outkast and the groups combine as one over a very hypnotic Three 6 Mafia produced beat. The sample used is Willie Hutch's "I Choose You" from the movie The Mack, which is the perfect backdrop for Andre 3000, Pimp C (R.I.P.), Bun B and Big Boi to spit tales of women, money and marriage. The song starts off with Andre 3000 rhyming over the elegant doo wop vocal harmonies until a stuttered drum kick changes the mood for Pimp C to spit fire. This beat change/mood switch happens each verse, fitting each rapper's personality and tone, kudos to DJ Paul and Juicy J for expertly crafting this record. For Black Friday Record Store Day, Get On Down presents "International Players Anthem" as a special collectible vinyl release shaped like U.G.K.'s home state of Texas!"

Various	Calabar-Itu Road	"When most people think about Nigerian music, the first thing that comes to mind is Lagos—the country's main commercial center, the glittering megacity that spawned Yoruba-speaking music luminaries such as Fela Kuti, King Sunny Ade, Sir Shina Peters and Wizkid. But Nigeria is a country of rich diversity, especially in its music: From the Igbo highlife and rock bands of east-central region, to the deep Edo roots rhythms from the midwest, to the keening, ornamented Fulani melodies of the north. But one region whose music has remained largely underexplored is the south eastern land of the Efik and Ibibio ethnic groups in Cross River and Akwa Ibom State—the region colloquially referred to as "Calabar." A cradle of culture, this region was one of the earliest outposts of Nigerian popular music. Its primordial rhythms traveled across the Atlantic during the slave trade to provide the part of the foundation for Afro-Cuban grooves that would go on to influence the development of jazz, rock &amp; roll, R&amp;B and funk. With the new Calabar-Itu Road compilation, Comb &amp; Razor Sound presents 15 heavy tracks recorded in the decade between 1972 and 1982, spotlighting rare music from "Calabar" superstars such as Etubom Rex Williams, Cross River Nationale, Charles "Effi" Duke, The Doves and Mary Afi Usuah. The package features a magazine-style booklet containing a wealth of information about the milieu with rare photographs and illustrations. The Calabar-Itu Road is the major artery linking modern-day Cross River and Akwa Ibom States. And Calabar-Itu Road: Groovy Sounds from South Eastern Nigeria (1972-1982) will link the region's music to the rest of the world!"

Various	James Brown's Funky People (Part 3)	"Get On Down continues its very welcome obsession with James Brown's stable of late '60s and early '70s talent – much of it culled from his People Records label, including various backing bands – by bringing this firsttime- ever-on-vinyl package to the world. The third volume in the groundbreaking Funky People series, originally released on CD in 2000, is just as incredible as the first two. And maybe even more fascinating to JB fans, because of the less-heard discoveries lurking in these grooves. With 12 tracks spanning 1967 to 1975, this is far from a "remainders" collection. Each cut here packs an undeniable punch. Featuring James' most talented side-people, including The JBs, Bobby Byrd, Marva Whitney, Lyn Collins and Vicki Anderson, Volume 3 goes even deeper in the cut than previous collections, with the white Ohio-based studio crew The Dapps (featuring drummer / vocalist Beau Dollar), the Dee Felice Trio and even a cheekily named side crew called the A.A.B.B. (Above Average Black Band). There are some impressive covers here, including the Dee Felice Trio's driving, jazzy version of James' "There Was A Time" (known to the hip-hop nation thanks to Chubb Rock's "Treat 'Em Right"); a live version of Lyn Collins covering the Isley Brothers' "It's My Thing"; in addition to her studio cover of James' "Give It Up Or Turnit A Loose." In retrospect it even sounds like James covers himself on the raw and powerful "Original Rock Version" of his 1972 hit "Talkin' Loud And Saying Nothin'," even though the Rock version was recorded first, in 1970. Marva Whitney's "If You Don't Give Me What I Want" is as powerful and emotional as a soul ballad gets. The A.A.B.B.'s "Pick Up The Pieces One By One" must have made the Average White Band want to hang up their instruments. And one truly fascinating alternate take here is the "Undubbed Version" of the JBs' "Blow Your Head," with the Moog work and main Fred Wesley trombone solo removed. It lets the groove shimmer in whole new light. The more that newcomers and diehard fans alike dig into the James Brown and People Records vaults, the more they realize that it's a neverending source of truly next-level funk and soul music. And you can be sure this aural goodness will keep flowing to the public, thanks to the exhaustive efforts of Get On Down." A1. James Brown Talkin' Loud &amp; Saying Nothin'
